

THE HALL-MILLS CASE

A Daily Pictorial Story of the Mysterious Jersey TragedyWatch for Tomorrow's Installment

HM-3

Dr. Hall possessed the high brow of a student and presented a striking figure, particularly fascinating to women, who eagerly danced attendance on him and who hunted excuses to visit him in the rectory, seemingly for parochial purposes.

Among these was Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, beautification that the minister was her favorite, the man for whose affections other men had striven, unknown to her husband, but it was no secret among certain members of the congregation she clandestinely idolized, the one to whom she gave herself without reservation.

While this illicit friendship was growing more intense, Mrs. Frances Stevens, the woman Dr. Hall had married, carried on her church work and outside charities little realizing that her dream of happiness was about to be shattered.

And James Mills, husband of Mrs. Mills, acting as sexton of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, apparently unconcerned about the reports of his wife's unfaithfulness, a man with an owl's look, whom everybody liked and pitied because of his seeming inability to grasp the truth.

TALK ON SLUMS REMOVAL August Heckscher will address the Downtown Chamber of Commerce tonight in the auditorium of Seward Park High School, Hester and Essex Streets, on his plan for rebuilding New York's slums.

SIMPSON HITS
STEVENS ALIBI

clared he thought Simpson was not getting considerate treatment.

Simpson scored a decisive victory over the grand jury yesterday when he appeared before its members and dared them to indict him.

The meeting broke up in a small riot after he had spoken his piece.

Repatee in the Jury Room Snyder, nearly inarticulate in his rage, managed to blurt out the accusation:—

"You're a liar."

"You're a gentleman," retorted Simpson, as the jury members left their seats and crowded about him.

When somebody shouted that he be excluded from the room, Simpson, retreating toward the door, smiled derisively at the angry group.

"Now that I've said what I wished to say, I'll exclude myself," he said, departing in victory.

PEACHES'S IDEAL HUSBAND MUST BE GOOD HEARTED

more her entirely in such matters. After all, a man should want to be successful for the sake of the advantages to his family; not because it adds so much to his personal prestige.

I guess I haven't told you so much what I expect in a man as what I don't want. But after all I wouldn't require that he be a paragon of all known virtues. I'm not that exacting. All I ask is that he doesn't have the unfortunate traits that I have outlined in this chapter.

Let him be normal, kind-hearted, generous, considerate and young—that's sufficient for any girl. To such a man any normal girl would prove a good wife. She would be proud to be the mother of his children!
